Principles for Revision of the Faculty Handbook Based on discussions of:

- Provost's Advisory Council on Tenure and Promotion
- Compensation Committee

This is the document brought to Senate last year. Notes in italics represent current status of each item.

Principles I: Revisions of Tenure and Promotion Sections in the Faculty Handbook

- 1. The Darr School of Agriculture and the Department of Library Science represent departmental units that are part of MSU but not part of any College and they therefore require special processes for tenure and promotion. Provisions must be added to the Handbook to allow tenure and promotion processes in these units to proceed without a review at the College level.
- Darr is a new unit and its policies are still in development.
- Policies for the Department of Library Science are currently inconsistent with the Handbook, but the structure and function of that unit is sufficiently different that a distinct T&P process may be appropriate. However, differences must be explicitly permitted by the Handbook.
- We note that accommodation of these two units will require many additional revisions to the Handbook.
- Last year, amendments were made to clarify the roles of the Dean of Library Services as Department Head of the Department of Library Science, and of the Director of the Darr School of Agriculture.
- Details of how annual review and tenure and promotion policies will differ for these units have not specified yet.
- 2. Language needs to be clear as to what criteria for promotion are in effect for Associate Professors working on the rank of Professor.
- There is some ambiguity in the current statement. FHRC is currently working on an update.
- Language was added to clarify which version was applicable. The added language included examples.
- 3. Early tenure and/or promotion is currently allowed for individuals who have an "exceptional record." The Handbook should provide guidance for what constitutes "exceptional" and require that departmental T&P guidelines include clear descriptions of their expectations for early tenure and/or promotion.
- Suggestion: Require that a candidate's record in both teaching and research be both qualitatively significantly above the norm for tenure and/or promotion; require that examples of expectations for early tenure/promotion be included in departmental documents.
- Specific language was added to the handbook on this topic. (Departmental guidelines should be updated to reflect these changes.)
- 4. The role of the departmental personnel committee and Dean in the selection process for external reviewers should be made clear.
- FHRC has drafted an amendment which includes the following provisions:
 - The departmental personnel committee will not have a mandatory role in the process, but may provide advice and consultation at the request of either the candidate or the Head.
 - o The Dean will need to approve the list of external reviewers.

X Language has been added to address this based on feedback from Senate. Departments may specify the extent to which their personnel committee must be involved. The Dean's role is one of verifying that appropriate procedures have been followed.

Principles II: Revisions of Annual Review Sections in the Faculty Handbook

- 1. It is an expectation that all academic departments conduct an annual performance review that results in some form of categorical rating.
- Each department's rating system should be designed so that the ratings could be used to calculate a salary increase based on merit if a salary pool above 2% becomes available.
- Flexibility in categorical ratings is permitted (by College), but ratings based on numerical scales are most readily adapted to assignment of merit pay.
- Language has been added that address some aspects of this system.
- 2. For consistency, T&P plan and annual performance review plans should utilize comparable criteria in the areas of teaching, research, and service.
- It is expected that consistency between T&P and annual performance review plans will be evaluated periodically at both the Departmental and College levels.
- At least in principle, this should already be policy to which all units adhere. Language should be added to the HB to emphasize this.
- 3. The T&P review is cumulative and the annual performance review's categorical rating represents only a snapshot of one year's work.
- This needs to be stated clearly in the HB.

Should sufficient funds become available for salary increases above 2%, new processes may need to be developed with input from the Compensation Committee that take into account both equity and performance.

- When merit pay becomes possible again, effort will be made to incorporate performance from years when merit pay was not available. Units that did not require categorical ratings for some or all of those non-merit-pay years will need to devise plans to account for those periods.
- We note that faculty may apply for equity adjustments even in years where there has been no merit pay, and this can be a way of addressing major achievements during "lean" years.
- Section 5.2 now states that the Compensation Committee will draft guidelines for any new performance-based compensation system (merit pay).
- It has been suggested that FHRC add language to clarify expectations for equity-based adjustments.
- 4. Clinical faculty, research faculty, and instructors may be allowed representation on departmental evaluation committees for annual reviews of faculty in similar positions (but not for tenure-track faculty). Decisions on whether or not to allow this should be made at the departmental level, with approval of the college dean.
- X This needs to be addressed in the HB.
- 5. When a committee that hears appeals on annual reviews (merit ratings) is considering appeals from instructors, clinical faculty, or research faculty (i.e., non-tenure track faculty), the committee should include representation from a faculty member of equivalent status (e.g., if there is an appeal from an instructor, the appeals committee should include a instructor).
- This needs to addressed in the HB to indicate that an appeals committee must include appropriate representation.

FHRC

Revisions for Septennial Review September Faculty Senate Meeting

The following shows a list of topics already identified for revisions by FHRC. This is by no means an exhaustive list and we expect to discover additional sections that require changes. We welcome input from all sectors within the campus community.

Here are sections that we expect to address:

Throughout Handbook

- Replace specific references to campus web pages (which change frequently) to more general references (e.g., "posted on the Provost's website).

1. Statement of Rationale and Objectives:

Rationale:

An interdisciplinary master's program is becoming more in demand as people move from one job to another because of economic issues of layoffs, cut-backs, and out-sourcing. This 36 credit hour (minimum) program provides a master's degree for those who struggle to find an acceptable fit for professional and creative needs from existing programs. The Masters of Science in Interdisciplinary Studies Program allows students to expand their knowledge and experiences consistent with their professional goals and objectives in one or more areas.

This graduate program will benefit anyone who needs to acquire focused skills, launch a new career unrelated to his/her undergraduate degree, and/or retool and update knowledge. The MSIS offers a focused program of study giving students advanced skills in a particular subject, not formally offered, and provides continuing education credit opportunities in many careers.

Objectives:

The main objective for the Master of Science in Interdisciplinary Studies Program is to provide students with knowledge and skills to maintain a current position in the workplace, move to a higher-paying position, or meet personal goals of increased knowledge in chosen related areas.

Disability Studies Minor - Rationale and Objectives (Attachment 1)

As part of Missouri State University's commitment to Inclusive Excellence, the Disability Studies Faculty Committee seeks to create an Interdisciplinary Disability Studies minor. It is an addition to CHPA Areas Studies Programs. This minor proposal is based on a socio-political model with medical elements as integrated content within the model. Disability Studies Minor includes interdisciplinary content, research, and engagement that de-stigmatizes disability by demonstrating the complexity of the social, historical, cultural, political, legal, and medical interactions and influences that create socio-political constructions and continuums related to disability. This minor as an emerging field will serve to benefit Missouri State University faculty, staff, students and the wider community (see DAS 100 Bibliography for current research).

Objectives:

- Develop an understanding of historical and contemporary perceptions of disability
- Identify and appreciate disability culture and its diversity and contributions of persons with disability in society
- Analyze and Evaluate how policies and laws historically and currently influence people with disabilities
- Analyze and critique the various societal and theoretical representations of disability including moral, medical and social models.
- Understand disability as an aspect of diversity that exists across other diverse groups
- Identify and apply the principles of Universal Design across various contexts, i.e. home, work, school, public spaces, etc.
- Prepare students to participate effectively in an inclusive society

Disability Studies Minor Anticipated Costs over the First 5 Years (Attachment 2)

Based on other interdisciplinary Area Studies minor enrollments (Asian Studies, Native American Studies, Latin American Studies, Gender Studies, African American Studies) that range from 4 to 20 students by minor per semester, there should be no significant cost for this minor. The introduction course DAS 100 is the only required new course attached to this minor.

As indicated in the Resources form, there are enough qualified faculty willing and able to teach it. Their plan is to rotate the course among them, so it may be offered on a regular basis without interfering with other required courses they teach for their departments.
