Preface

This handbook outlines the program and requirements for the Master of Arts in Religious Studies at Missouri State University. It is meant to supplement but not supersede the MSU Graduate Catalog. Therefore, students are advised to refer to the relevant portions of the Graduate Catalog for the full rules and regulations pertaining to their time at Missouri State.

Program description

The Master of Arts in Religious Studies will develop sound knowledge and professional skills in the discipline of Religious Studies, as well as in the broader context of related disciplines in the humanities. The following areas of emphasis are available: Religions of Asia; Religions of Europe and the Middle East; Biblical Studies; and Religion and Culture. Upon completion of the program, students will have acquired a foundation of knowledge, skills, and perspectives for working in a variety of vocations where a high degree of versatility in human affairs, knowledge in humanities, and an ability to negotiate among various religious perspectives are required. The program provides a strong foundation for doctoral studies and teaching, and it can enhance preparation for such professional careers as non-profit work, counseling, and ministry.

Admission requirements

1. A bachelor's degree in religious studies or a related program in the humanities or social sciences. Some coursework in religious studies is desirable.
2. A minimum GPA of 3.00 on a 4.00 scale. Students who do not meet the GPA requirement may opt to take the GRE and normally will be expected to score a minimum of 158 on the verbal section (580 under the old scoring system before August 1, 2011) and a minimum of 300 (1,000 under the old scoring system) on the combined verbal and quantitative sections.
3. There are additional university requirements for international applicants, including documentation of financial support and demonstration of proficiency in the English language if your primary language is not English. See International Services' Requirements for Graduate Admission for more information.
4. Applicants lacking the appropriate qualifications for the program may be admitted but will be required to rectify deficiencies with appropriate course work. Usually these courses will not count toward the master's degree. Students who do not meet the GPA or GRE standards outlined above may be granted admission to the program at the discretion of the Graduate Program Director.

Accelerated Master's Degree Option

Eligible undergraduate majors in Religious Studies or an equivalent department from an accredited institution may apply for early admission to the Master of Arts in Religious Studies Program. Once accepted for early admission, students will be able to take up to twelve (12) credit hours at the 600- and 700-level that apply to both their undergraduate and graduate programs. Before enrolling in courses to be counted for both undergraduate and graduate credit, an undergraduate student must be admitted into the accelerated master's program and complete a Mixed Credit Form to receive approval from the Graduate Program Director, Department Head, and the Graduate College Dean.

Admission requirements for the Accelerated Master's program

1. Junior standing, with an overall GPA of 3.4.
2. Major in Religious Studies or equivalent, having completed fifteen hours in the department, including at least six hours at the 300-level or above, with a GPA in the major of 3.5.
3. Recommendation by a faculty member in Religious Studies or an equivalent department from another institution.
4. Admission by the Graduate Committee of the Department of Religious Studies.

Degree requirements (minimum of 30 hrs)

1. Core requirements (15 hours).

REL 685 Theories of Religion (3 hours)*

REL 711 Seminar in Religions of Asia (variable topics, 3 hours)

REL 731 Seminar in Biblical Studies (variable topics, 3 hours)

REL 751 Seminar in Religions of Europe and the Middle East (variable topics, 3 hours)

REL 771 Seminar in Religion and Culture (variable topics, 3 hours)

*Students who have completed REL 580 Theories of Religion must substitute for REL 685 an additional 600- or 700-level course (3 hours) among their electives.

2. Electives (15 hours).

Seminar electives:

Students writing a thesis for their research component must complete two additional seminars (6 hours), distributed across two of four options (REL 711, 731, 751, 771).

Students creating a research portfolio for their research component must complete three additional seminars (9 hours), distributed across three of four options (REL 711, 731, 751, 771).

Additional electives:

All students must complete additional elective hours selected from 600- and 700-level courses to total 30 hours. At least six of the elective hours must be in the Religious Studies Department. For students writing a thesis, up to 6 of the elective hours may be in REL 799 Thesis, the first 3 hours typically taken after the student has completed 12 hours of coursework and the second 3 hours taken the following semester to complete the thesis.

3. Advisory committee. Initially each student will be advised by the Graduate Program Director. As soon as possible, the student will select a faculty member to chair a graduate advisory committee consisting of at least three persons. This committee will supervise the remainder of the candidate's graduate program.

4. Program of study. The candidate's program will be structured by the Advisory Committee in consultation with the student.

5. Comprehensive examination. The written and oral comprehensive examination will be administered by the student's Advisory Committee upon the completion of at least 12 hours of course work, normally at the beginning of the third semester. This examination must be passed before the student begins writing a thesis or creating a research portfolio.

6. Research. In addition to completing their course work, students must complete either a thesis or a research portfolio in a manner acceptable to the student's Advisory Committee. The thesis or research portfolio constitutes the student's research component and will be defended orally before the student's Advisory Committee.

Foreign Language

Foreign language courses are not required for admission to the M.A. program, or for completion of it. However, students who are bound for Ph.D. programs will likely find that those programs require French or German or both, either for admission or completion of the doctorate. And they may require additional languages as well, depending on the student's area in Religious Studies (such as Hebrew and Greek in Biblical Studies). So, students who plan on continuing for a Ph.D. would be well advised to study French or German. Since the introductory classes on those languages at Missouri State are not graduate classes, it is unlikely that they will be covered by financial aid for M.A. students.

Readings in Religious Studies Elective (REL 796)

Students may arrange for a maximum of 9 hours of Readings in Religious Studies (REL 796) under the direction of a member of the Department's Graduate Faculty. The main purpose of REL 796 is to carry out a research project of interest to both the student and the professor that is relevant to the student's research agenda and not addressed by the Department's regular curriculum. Such courses typically entail a reading list (proposed by the student, the professor, or both) and routine meetings with the professor to discuss progress, culminating in a final research paper, a literature review, an annotated bibliography, or other written work. Students may not enroll in REL 796 in order to prepare for the Comprehensive Examination.

Permission to Register Each Semester

The Graduate College requires each student to obtain permission to register each semester. Initially, permission will be given by the Graduate Program Director—although it can also be given by the Department Head—by releasing the student to register online. After a Primary Advisor is selected, he or she may also give permission. The student should anticipate meeting with the Graduate Program Director or Primary Advisor to review student's progress in the program before receiving permission and being released to register.

Permission to Register for REL 796 and REL 799

Students must have an instructor's permission to register for either Readings in Religious Studies (REL 796) or Thesis (REL 799). Prior to the semester in which a student hopes to pursue a 796 or 799, the student contacts his/her prospective instructor/Thesis Advisor to plan the project. The instructor/advisor and student complete the Application for Independent Study form, which details the requirements for the course. A student cannot register for REL 796 or 799 before this paperwork is processed.

Academic Integrity and Style Manuals

The Department of Religious Studies abides by the University's Academic Integrity Policies and Procedures. All graduate students are expected to be familiar with these policies. Students who commit academic dishonesty—cheating, fabricating data or information, plagiarizing, or helping another student to commit academic dishonesty—even if it is not intentional may fail the assignment, fail the course, be reported to MSU's Academic Integrity Council, and be removed from the university. For international students, this can severely affect their immigration status. MSU's Writing Center has provided a short handout explaining Plagiarism and Paraphrasing.

The Department has adopted Kate L. Turabian, A Manual for Writers of Term Papers, Theses, and Dissertations, 9th ed. (University of Chicago Press, 2018) as its style manual. Students writing papers in the area of biblical studies may use The SBL Handbook of Style, 2nd ed. (SBL Press, 2014). Although individual instructors may have their own specific style requirements, students should use Turabian or the SBL Handbook for guidance in citing and documenting sources and employing other stylistic techniques (grammar, syntax, etc.) in seminar papers and other written work correctly. Students writing theses must follow the guidelines of the Graduate College.

Completing the Master's Degree in Four Semesters

The M.A. in Religious Studies is a two-year (four semesters) degree, although students writing a Thesis often choose to take a third year to complete the Thesis. The chart below presents a schedule for completing the degree within two years; required coursework is taken each semester while also completing Comprehensive Examination and Thesis or Research Portfolio requirements.

	THESIS OPTION	RESEARCH PORTFOLIO OPTION
Coursework (distributed over four semesters)	Six 700-level seminars (18 hrs) + 3 hrs REL 685 + 3 hrs 600/700-level elective + 6 hrs REL 799 Thesis = 30 hrs total	Seven 700-level seminars (21 hrs) + 3 hrs REL 685 + 6 hrs 600/700-level electives = 30 hrs total
By the end of the second semester	Select Primary Advisor & Advisory Committee; Develop Thesis topic	Select Primary Advisor & Advisory Committee
Summer between second & third semesters	Comprehensive Exam Prep; Thesis research	Comprehensive Exam Prep

Third semester	Take REL 799 and write Thesis Proposal; begin writing Thesis	Begin assembling Portfolio
Fourth semester	Take REL 799 and complete Thesis	Complete Portfolio
End of fourth semester	Oral Defense of Thesis (See pp. 14-15, below, for specific final semester deadlines)	Oral Defense of Portfolio (See pp. 14-15, below, for specific final semester deadlines)

Primary Advisor and Advisory Committee

Initially, each student entering the M.A. program in Religious Studies is advised by the department's Graduate Program Director, who also may help in the selection of the Primary Advisor and Advisory Committee. The student should select Advisor and Committee prior to the completion of fourteen hours in the Department, typically before the end of the first year as a graduate student.

Primary Advisor. The student's Primary Advisor, who also serves as Chair of the student's Advisory Committee, should be a specialist in the student's major area of interest.

Advisory Committee. The student's Advisory Committee is composed of the Primary Advisor and two other members of the Religious Studies Graduate Faculty. The Committee usually is made up of graduate faculty members with whom the student has taken, or will take, graduate seminars. The three Committee members must represent at least two areas within the department. In exceptional cases a student writing a Thesis may add a fourth member chosen from the graduate faculty of another department; this member will take part only in Thesis advisement and the Thesis defense. The Advisory Committee supervises the student's progress toward the degree. Members will make decisions regarding any special situations (unless the situation requires action on the part of the Department's Graduate Committee), administer and adjudicate the student's Comprehensive Examination, and oversee and approve the student's Thesis or Research Portfolio. To set up the Committee, the student must complete and acquire faculty signatures on the M.A. Student's Advisory Committee form and submit the completed form to the Graduate Program director. If the student chooses to have different faculty on the Committee for the Thesis or Research Portfolio than for the Comprehensive Examination, the student must submit a second M.A. Student's Advisory Committee form, signed by the new faculty. And if a change is made to the Committee members for any other reason, the student must submit a new form.

Committee Member on Leave. The Department does not expect graduate faculty on sabbaticals or other approved leaves from the University to serve on Graduate Committees. In the event that a student wishes to take the Comprehensive Examination or complete the Thesis or Portfolio during a semester in which a Committee member is on leave, it is anticipated that the student either will wait until the faculty member has completed the leave or will select another Committee member competent in the same topic.

Advising During the Summer. Faculty generally are not able to work with students during the summer months. A student should communicate far in advance with Committee members to determine whether they will agree to oversee completion of the student's Comprehensive Exam, Thesis, or Portfolio during the summer. Ordinarily, students should plan to complete the degree during the Fall or Spring semester.

Comprehensive Examination

The Comprehensive Examination, which includes written and oral components, tests the student's mastery of the three major topics chosen for the exam. It is administered by the student's Advisory Committee, normally at the beginning of a student's third semester or the completion of at least 12 hours of coursework.

Written Component. The Advisory Committee must represent at least two of the M.A. program's four areas of study. The student writes a 3-hour essay exam on three topics (one hour per topic); each committee member will oversee a topic. The essay for each topic will draw mostly on graduate coursework undertaken with that Committee member, but he/she may also assign significant books and articles on the topic in addition to those encountered in prior coursework. Each Comprehensive Examination essay tests the student's comprehension of a major topic in the examiner's area of study. The student is required to achieve a score of 80 per cent overall to pass the written exam and must pass all sections of the written exam before moving on to the oral component. A student who does not pass the written exam will have one opportunity to take it again, and this must be by the end of the semester following the first attempt (for example, by the end of the spring semester after a first attempt in the fall).

Oral Component. The one-hour oral exam generally occurs one week following the written exam. It is chaired by the student's Primary Advisor and includes the other two Committee Members. Each examiner has about 20 minutes to question the student concerning the essay written for that Committee Member. Students should be prepared for a rigorous but fair question/answer session.

Scheduling the Comprehensive Examination. Committee members work with the student to determine the content and format of the Comprehensive Examination, but the student is responsible for contacting his/her Committee well in advance to agree on exam topics and reading lists. Students must also work with Committee members and the Administrative Assistant, Jane Terry, to schedule times for the written and oral components. Upon scheduling the Comprehensive Examination, the student will complete Section 1 of the Graduate College's Comprehensive Examination Application form and submit it to Jane. Immediately before the oral exam, the student should pick up the form from Jane and bring it to the oral exam.

Research Option One: Thesis

For many students, the Master's Thesis is their first opportunity to engage in comprehensive research and produce extended, original, scholarly work on a specialized topic. For students intending to pursue doctoral studies, the Thesis is an ideal opportunity both to develop the skills necessary for more advanced research projects and to begin the process of specialization that will continue in a Ph.D. program.

Selecting the Thesis Topic and Advisory Committee. As soon as possible in the first year, a student pursuing the Thesis option should begin exploring a thesis topic and invite a member of the Department's Graduate Faculty to serve as Thesis Advisor, who also acts as Primary Advisor and Committee Chair. The topic of the Thesis typically influences which other faculty members the student invites to join his or her Thesis Advisory Committee; two of the committee members may be from the same area within the department and the third must be from a second area.

Completing the Thesis Requirements on the Graduate College's Blackboard Site.

The Graduate College has created a course on Blackboard to guide a student through the process of writing a Thesis. The course provides instructions on how to submit the Thesis at the end of the process, but also includes several other steps that the student must complete along the way in order to have the Thesis approved by the Graduate College. So during the first year, the student should register for the Thesis course and begin to work on those steps. The Blackboard course includes instructions on formatting and other issues of style, which the student must follow meticulously.

Working on the Thesis in the Third Semester. Students wishing to complete a Thesis may earn a maximum of 6 credit hours (REL 799) for the Thesis, although one does not have to be enrolled in REL 799 to be working on the Thesis. Usually during the third semester of study a student will take 3 hours of REL 799, and will be expected to submit a research product that can be the basis for a grade in that course. Many advisors require the student to write a formal Thesis Proposal. A student should consult closely with his/her Advisor about specific expectations, but typically a Thesis Proposal includes:

- Thesis's working title and abstract including an initial formulation of the student's thesis statement
- Chapter outline that includes a working title and an abstract for each chapter indicating how the chapter will contribute to developing the thesis's arguments in support of the thesis statement
- Proposed schedule for completing chapter drafts
- Development of an extensive bibliography on the subject
- Formal literature review that demonstrates the student's familiarity with relevant scholarship

Much of this material will become part of the introductory chapter of the Thesis itself. The student's Primary Advisor must approve the Proposal before the student begins writing the Thesis.

Completing the Thesis in the Fourth Semester. Students usually take another 3 hours of 799 as they work on the Thesis in their final semester. The student is expected to maintain regular contact with his/her Advisor throughout the research and writing process. Ideally, by the beginning of the final semester the student is submitting drafts of individual chapters to his/her Advisor as drafts are completed so that the Advisor can provide feedback. The student can anticipate substantial revisions as the Advisor and then the other Advisory Committee members read chapter drafts. Thus, it is best to plan ahead. Reading and revising the Thesis will take time and the Graduate College sets specific thesis submission deadlines each semester; for these and other relevant dates, see the Graduate Calendar in the Graduate Catalog and the department-specific calendars pp. 14-15, below.

The M.A. Thesis is typically about 80 to 100 pages in length, comprising 3 to 5 chapters including an Introduction and Conclusion. Permission must be obtained from the student's Advisory Committee and the Graduate Program Director if the Thesis is to exceed 120 pages.

If the student has made progress on the thesis, but has not completed it at the end of the fourth semester, he/she will receive temporary grade of Z until successfully defending the Thesis, at which point the student's Primary Advisor will assign a letter grade. If a Z grade is not removed within four years, it will become a W (withdraw without penalty).

If the Thesis is not finished when the student has completed 30 hrs of course work, the student must enroll in GEN 798 (see p. 16) each semester until the Thesis is successfully defended.

Passing the Thesis. The thesis is passed only after it has been orally defended by the student and approved by both the student's Advisory Committee and the Dean of the Graduate College (see Oral Defense of the Thesis or Research Portfolio, below). The Advisory Committee may pass a Thesis either with no revisions required or with minor revisions (requiring the student and her/his Advisor to ensure that the mandated revisions are made). If the Thesis fails to pass, the student will be required to resubmit and re-defend the revised Thesis to the same Advisory Committee prior to the end of the following semester.

Research Option Two: Research Portfolio

The Portfolio allows for more variety, as opposed to the more specialized work of a Thesis, and may be attractive to students who wish to explore the breadth of areas covered by the study of religion, who wish to focus on a primary intellectual and research theme pursued throughout their graduate studies, or who are not intent on pursuing doctoral studies. The Portfolio consists of written coursework that best represents the student's research interest(s) during his/her course of study in the Master's.

Portfolio Contents. The Research Portfolio is 60 to 80 pages in length, including Title Page and Introductory Essay (see below). Permission must be obtained from the student's Advisory Committee and the Graduate Program Director if the Portfolio is to exceed 100 pages. The Portfolio must include materials from at least three different courses and at least two major seminar papers; typically a major seminar paper is at least twenty pages long. The student's Portfolio Advisory Committee includes the faculty members in whose seminars the student produced the two papers. The remaining Portfolio contents may be substantive written assignments (e.g., essays, book reviews, short exegesis papers) from 600- and/or 700-level courses, subject to Primary Advisor approval. At least one of these shorter pieces was produced for a course taught by the third Committee member.

Introductory Essay. In addition, the Portfolio includes a 6- to 8-page introductory essay, which reflects upon the contents of the portfolio, exploring thematic and methodological connections among the various pieces of written work and discussing how the work represents the student's research interests and intellectual development during his/her course of study.

Passing the Portfolio. Assembling the Research Portfolio does not require the same level of interaction between the student and his/her Primary Advisor and Advisory Committee as does writing a Thesis. Nevertheless, the complete Portfolio should be presented to the Primary Advisor at least four weeks before the Oral Defense and, with the Advisor's approval, to the Advisory Committee at least two weeks before the defense, allowing time to make revisions as requested by Committee members (see the Calendars on pp. 14–15 for deadlines). Following the Oral Defense (see below) and after the Portfolio is approved by the Advisory Committee, the student provides a copy of the Portfolio, spiral-bound with a clear plastic cover, to the Religious Studies Department.

Oral Defense of the Thesis or Portfolio

The one-hour Oral Defense is the final major requirement for completing the degree. After the student's Advisory Committee have approved the Thesis or Research Portfolio as ready for defending, the student and his/her Committee will meet for the Oral Defense. During the Defense, the Committee will ask the student to address questions about the Thesis or Portfolio. At the end of the Oral Defense, the Committee will determine whether to pass the Thesis or Portfolio or require the student to complete further revisions and resubmit the Thesis or Portfolio to his or her Primary Advisor.

Thesis Oral Defense. The student should bring a copy of the Thesis Approval Form (available on the Graduate College's Thesis Course on Blackboard) to the defense, with the top part filled out. When the student has successfully defended the Thesis, at the end of the Oral Defense the Primary Advisor and Committee members will sign the Thesis Approval Form.

Portfolio Oral Defense. When a student has successfully defended the Portfolio, at the end of the Oral Defense the Primary Advisor and either the Graduate Program Director or Department Head will sign a Seminar Report for Non-Thesis Option form. The student should bring a copy of this form to the defense and submit the completed and signed form to Jane Terry, who will submit it to the Graduate College.

REL 751 and 771 are always offered in the Fall semester and REL 711 and 731 in the Spring semester. 700-level seminars usually are offered in the early evening once per week, as are some 600-level courses.

Courses offered in other departments may count toward the M.A. in Religious Studies, including PSY 633 Psychological Issues in Religion; HST 642 Ancient Israel; and COM 714 Qualitative Research Methods in Communication. This is not an exhaustive list; students may take courses outside the Religious Studies Department with the approval of their Advisory Committee and the Graduate Program Director.

Active in Research (GEN 798)

Students who have completed all course work and are only working on the Thesis or Portfolio must sign up for GEN 798 Active in Research. This course is offered at a reduced fee ($75) and allows the following:

- access to the library, including online services such as interlibrary loans, MOBIUS, and restricted access databases
- opportunity to purchase a parking permit
- access to computer services and campus email

GEN 798 is a zero credit course and the grade is “P” (pass) or “W” (student discontinues participation in the course and is dropped from the course).

Graduate Assistantships

The Department has a limited number of GA positions that are awarded annually on a competitive basis (e.g., undergraduate and/or graduate GPA, relevant experience, areas of expertise, ability to work with undergraduate students, and other competencies are considered). GA positions entail on average 20 hours of work each week each semester. Assistantships begin the week prior to the first week of classes. Specific hours of employment are arranged between the student and the faculty member supervisor. The graduate assistantship provides a stipend of approximately $8,000 per academic year (nine months) and a tuition waiver. A graduate assistant is required to complete a minimum of 6 hours of graduate course work (600-level or above) during each semester of appointment. Awarding of these merit-based scholarships is based on the recommendation of the department’s Graduate Committee and Department Head and approval of the Graduate College Dean. Although graduate students can hold an assistantship for a maximum of two years, GA positions in the Department are not automatically renewed; those wishing to renew their current assistantship must submit a letter of intent outlining the progress and accomplishments made during their assistantships, typically due to the Graduate Program Director in mid February.

GAs’ duties differ, depending on the needs of the faculty members with whom they work. GAs assist professors in working with undergraduate students (e.g., running tutorial groups, grading undergraduate exams and papers, maintaining Blackboard and grade and attendance records, offering review sessions prior to examinations, delivering lectures) and assisting professors with their research or library work as needed, as well as generally contributing to the ongoing life of the Department.

Those wishing to apply for a GA position should see Religious Studies Graduate Assistantships and contact the Religious Studies Graduate Program Director for the timing and requirements of the application process. Decisions for each year’s GA positions are generally made by the Graduate Committee in late March/early April for the fall semester.

Funding for Conference Presentations and Thesis Research for REL Graduate Students

The Department of Religious Studies and the College of Humanities and Public Affairs encourage and support graduate students' research by making funding available for presentation of their papers at conferences and for extraordinary or unusual costs incurred by thesis research. Funding for graduate student research is awarded on a case-by-case basis depending on the merit of the proposal and the availability of financial resources.

Conference Presentations

Religious Studies graduate students may request funds from the department to help with the expense of presenting their research at a conference. Students may receive up to $300 per conference, as funds are available. The student must be presenting a paper at the conference (no funds if just attending). Students may not apply for funds for conferences for which funding is already being provided by the department.

Funding can be awarded twice in a student's graduate career, once per academic year. Preference will be given to students who have not previously received travel funding from the department and to those who are presenting at a national meeting.

Any student seeking funding from the department must first apply for and be approved for Graduate Student Travel Funding from the Graduate College. The Graduate College must receive the application at least two weeks prior to date of travel, but it is best to apply earlier in order to hear back from the College and submit your application to the department (also prior to date of travel). To request funds from the department, the student should submit to the department's administrative assistant, Jane Terry: 1) a copy of the student's Graduate Student Travel Funding application materials submitted to the Graduate College; 2) confirmation from the Graduate College that it will help to fund the student's travel; and 3) a cover letter requesting department funds including a detailed budget for how they will be spent.

Prior to traveling, a student whose request for funding from the department has been granted must consult with Jane Terry about how to pay for items covered by the funding (such as mileage, airline tickets, food, and hotels), the required documentation of expenses (to be submitted upon the student's return), and so on. In order to disburse funds the department must follow the rules of Missouri State's Office of Financial Services.

Thesis Research

Religious studies graduate students writing theses may request funds from the department to help defray the real costs of supplies, materials, and travel needed to facilitate student research. Thesis research funding is not to be used for books, duplicating materials, or other items purchased with the intent that they become the personal property of the student. Thesis funding may also not be used for printing and binding of the thesis, as that is a student's personal expense. Students may receive from the Religious Studies Department a one-time award of up to $300.

Postbaccalaureate and Non-Degree Seeking Students

Postbaccalureate students. At the discretion of the Department Head and Graduate Program Director, students may register and take courses before they are accepted into the M.A. program in Religious Studies. However, no more than 9 credit hours of graduate credit earned as a postbaccalaureate student may be counted toward the graduate degree.

Non-degree seeking students may include the following:

1. Undeclared Major: Students who do not plan to pursue a master's degree at Missouri State, but wish to complete course work for graduate credit.
2. Post-Master's: Students who have received a master's or higher graduate degree and wish to continue taking course work for graduate credit without pursuing another graduate degree.
3. Visiting Student: Students who are actively pursuing a graduate degree at an institution other than Missouri State and are currently in good standing. Visiting students are not required to submit official transcripts from an undergraduate institution. However, the applicant must submit a letter from the Graduate Dean or Registrar at a regionally accredited university certifying that the student is enrolled in a graduate degree program and is in good standing. A visiting student may enroll for no more than 12 hours of graduate courses at Missouri State.
